Spring flowers! Ah! loyal heart and true, Spring flowers for me, who never knew
The gladness of life's spring;
Who never felt the sunshine warm,
Whose youth was wrapped in cloud and storm,
The darkest fate could bring.

Unmeet for me. Yet lay them here, Close to my hand, and draw a-near
With your grave, tender smile;
Nay, closer yet, that I may trace Each feature of the well-known face, Although I sigh the while.

Time-worn, but resolute, I see The face that makes earth heaven to me Through these my shortening days.
Grief-worn, but patient, it has cheered My heart that doubted, shrank, and feared
In life's bewildering maze.

Centre Mills Pa,

4-25-'94,

Dear Sara,-

Your letter was received yesterday, and will answer at once as you requested, I am very well pleased that you can come in May instead of June. If you can come a few days before the 14th come ahead, I am ready for you at any time. I sent for lovely embroidery, Grandma says when you come, I can help you all the time, if my assistance will be acceptable, and I need not do any thing else. I think I have more sewing than we can do in one week, but perhaps I can finish some of it then, or if we need some one, I think I can get some one. It is very kind of you to come here before you go to Milton, and I am sure I thank you very much. Hoping to see you before very long, I will close,

Your friend,
Flora Meyer.
